President G. P. Stewart,

Auburn Theological Seminary.

My dear President Stewart:

I know Professor Morgan quite well, and I know that he is regarded as a good teacher at Kingston. He is of course a scholar with somewhat advanced views, but I think would be stimulating to students. I should not say that he has great vivacity, but I should be willing to take risks for his making eighteen lectures on subjects raised by the war successful in a summer school. We had him as a preacher in the University some years ago. He is a much quieter man than Dr. Kilpatrick, not as good a preacher, not as emotional, but there is no question as to his ability as a thinker.

I am looking forward to spending part of the time of your Centennial Celebrations with you next October to which you have so kindly invited me. I am sorry that on account of our Board meeting on the Thursday I could not accept your first invitation, but I hope to be with you on the Wednesday. The pressure of my work is such at that period of the session that I could not venture to be away for more than the one day. I hope that your arrangements are proceeding satisfactorily.

I was in Philadelphia last week and also in New York, and have been delighted with the change that has come over the country in the last year. We can now look forward not only to a satisfactory conclusion of the war but to the finest kind of relations between our Anglo-Saxon peoples in the days of our children and for all time to come I hope.

With kindest regards, I am,

Yours sincerely,

President.
